WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Several Republican members of the House have been in consultation since the president's message was made public to de-Vat a method whereby they could secure a definite statement of the condition of the treasury.

Mr. Walker, of Massachusetts, will endeavor to bring about an investigation of the finances by an expert under the direction of the committee on appropriations.

After consultation with leading Republicans in both the House and Senate, Mr. Walker has outlined a plan to throw light upon the principal mat- trip. ters which he thinks should be made

He has a resolution, which will be referred to the committee on appropriations, authorizing that committee to employ a suitable expert, to whom departmental officers are requested to give any information in their power and who is to prepare a statement of the following matters:

All claims against the United States that were not naid before Luis 1 1885.

All claims against the United States that were not paid before July 1, 1895, that have been favorably reported upon by any committee of the House, and on which of such claims the court of claims has rendered judgment in favor of the claimant; all claims on which the court of claims has rendered judgment in favor of claimant, but which the court of claims has render-ed judgment in favor of claimant, but which have not yet been passed upon by any committee of the House; a list of all accounts of Congress providing our any public work, where the work was not completed and paid for prior to July 1, 1836, the statement to give the date of the act, the total sum to be expended under the act, (or esti-mate thereof), and the total amount appropriated under or because of the act, the date upon which the first moneys were paid out of the United States treasury under appropriation.

moneys were paid out of the United States treasury under appropriation, and the amount of money paid out during each calendar quarter under each appropriation up to July 1, 1835.

The value of so much of all government work done and approved of by the proper officers, on or before June 30, in each year of the four years prior to 1895, which had not been paid for prior to July 1, in each year.

When any of the acts mentioned were passed to provide promises to be used passed to provide promises to be used in the place of premises for which the government was paying rent, the rents paid in each quarter of any calendar year since the passage of the act to be given in the statement.

One of the aims of this plan is to substantiate the statements made by the Republicans that Secretary Carlisle has delayed the payment of appropri-ations and held back public works in order that the treasury might make the best possible showing.

The bill provides for keeping out such immigrants as cannot read and write in some language, while the impression has obtained that it means that immigrants who cannot read and write the English language are to be prohibited. Senator Lodge says the latter provision would be absurd, as many desirable immigrants come to this country who are highly educated in their own language and who do not understand English.

The son appealed in vain to the passers-by to assist him in getting his father to their home; but his appeal fell on deaf ears and stony hearts. A glance was enough for them; they formed their own conclusions and passed carelessly on—they had no time to attend to a drunken man. But all the time the eyes were growing more dim and the pulse more faint, and only the boy realized it. He was frantic with grief, until at last a good samaritan in the form of a kind-hearted wood vender lent a hand and they conveyed the unfortunate man to his home on South Temple between M and N streets. SCCIAL AMUSEMENTS.

The Doll Bazar began its career in full swing yesterday and all evening the public crowded Unity hall to see the colection of wax beauties that line the lection of wax beauties that line the walls and counters. It was in the hands of the Free Kindergarten association and the charming members of this organization were kept busy making sales of their collection and vending tickets for the figures to be raffled away.

The bazar is a perfect one in every detail, and the dolls are so arranged as to give a very pleasing effect. The first section encountered by the spectator upon entering is the counter of President McVicker and Mrs. Rivers, here a rare variety of notions are exhibited. Nearby is the booth of Mrs. Daveler and Mrs. Judge Henderson, who have an unusually pratty assortment of blonde haired and peach complexioned figures. At Mrs. McVicker's stall is a unique and coeffy behy cradle, contributed by The Herald, and the Tribune and News offerings, a silver tea set and a muscular looking doll as large as an infant, Another doll occupies a small pedestal close by, the gift of the Argus, and Miss Judge and Miss Lela Davis give chances for the pet in return for quarters. The north end of the hall is presided over by Mrs. Egbert Roberts and Mrs. Fox, who hover around the dolls sent in by thespians of local prominence. One of the dolls is from winsome Victory Bateman and represents her as she appeared in "Sweethearts." A queer figure from Hugh Ward is labelled "Woodrow" and is supposed to show how he looked in the same drama. Rebecca Warren also has a preittly dressed doll in this department, showing her make up as the festive Susan. Howard Kyle and Maud Adama are likewise represented, and Mattile Royle-King has a pretty figure of Margarite in the now famous drama. "Frienda"

Miss Jean Groo has charge of the pret tiest doll of them all, it is called California and was sent from the coast by Mrs. Requa. A card from the donor hangs near it. It come," it says, "to represent the Golden state and bring with me the floral emblem of sunshine and flowers. Domated by Mrs. Requa through Mrs. Isaac Jennings." This choice humber is also to be raffied.

A candy stall occupies the small apartment to the south, and Miss Lucille Jennings and Miss Groo are the fair vendors. Mrs. Roberts on the other side of the hall disposes of the home made candies.

Pot a few more buibs for succession of bloom in the window garden.
Cacti should be watered spartingly from now on, allowing them to take their winter's rest.
It is not well to give the calla too much pot room, for foliage may thus be produced instead of flowers.
The hardy chrysanthemums outside may be made to bloom until after several hard freezings, if the blossoms are slightly protected at night.
Give the window plants as much air as possible on warm days, and make arrangements for protecting the outdoor plants on cold nights
Catefully inspect every plant brought into the house to discover any lurking insects, and give each plant a thorough syringing before setting on the plant shelves.
